JESSE M. BARRETT,
Major, AC,
Group S-2.

17. REMARKS OR EYEWITNESS STATEMENTS:

The missing A/C was flying in the low squadron of the Group. There were twelve A/C in the squadron, of which only two returned to base. The remainder are missing. The formation was subjected to severe and intense fighter attacks about 1150 hours in the vicinity of the I.P. which was 52°11'N-10°35'E. It is definitely established that the missing A/C was lost due to these attacks, but no one can be found who can say definitely what happened to this A/C. The crews of the two A/C in the low squadron which did return and the crews of the A/C in the lead and high squadrons have been able to furnish some information with respect to certain of the missing A/C but noen as to this one. Statements can be obtained that an A/C was seen to go down under certain circumstances, but since they cannot be tied definitely to any particular A/C which was lost, they have been omitted.
