

303rd BG (H) Combat Mission No. 139

22 April 1944

Target: Marshalling Yards, Hamm, Germany

Crews Dispatched: 30

Crews Lost: Lt. Seddon & Lt. Larson

Crew Members Lost or Wounded: 1 crewman injured

Length of Mission: 6 hours, 25 minutes

Bomb Load: 12 x 500 lb M-64 G.P. bombs

Bombing Altitudes: Group A 22,000 ft; Group B 23,500 ft

Ammo Fired: 550 rounds

The marshalling yards at Hamm, important German rail junction, received a terrific pounding today as bombers from this group joined other Eighth Air Force Fortresses in an effort that left the place in ruins. As the bombers left, large fires were seen raging in the city and in the neighborhood adjacent to the marshalling yards, while the yards proper were covered with a pall of smoke and dust that already reached up to 10,000 feet.

Anti-aircraft fire furnished the only opposition to the Fortresses today and, while it was not particularly intense, two lucky bursts accounted for two of the bombers from this base. Parachutes were seen coming out as the ships went down. Ten aircraft sustained flak battle damage, one major and nine minor.

There were no clouds at the target and visibility was unlimited. Enemy fighters were nowhere to be found today as P-47s, P-51s and P-38s buzzed around the formations in a close escort all the way to and from the target. Even on the airfields over which the bombers passed, no enemy aircraft were seen. The mission was led by Col. Kermit D. Stevens of Eugene and Portland, Oregon, Group Commander. All planes took off between 1625-1635 hours. Only one returned early, #42-31177 Lonesome Polecat, 359BS-L (Meier), with No. 1 engine failure.

The 303BG-A lead Group dropped 216 500-lb. AN-M64 bombs from 22,000 feet. The 303BG-B high Group dropped 128 500-lb. AN-M64 bombs from 23,500 feet. Both Groups bombed the primary target. One high Group B-17 jettisoned its bombs. One aircraft in each Group was lost after being hit by flak.

2Lt. John R. Seddon and his 358BS crew in #42-39807 Nero, were flying a 359BS B-17 in a composition Squadron formation led by a 360BS crew. Nero was having trouble with the No. 3 engine just after "bombs away." The engine almost quit and then would start up again with power surging on and off intermittently. Lt. Seddon appeared to be unable to feather the prop, could not hold formation, and dropped back. When last seen, the Fortress appeared to be under control and holding altitude. Sgt. Mummery reported that the B-17 was hit by ME-109s after leaving the formation. The German pilot, after further disabling the aircraft, lowered and raised his landing gear as a signal for the Fortress to land. The crew elected to bail out. At this time the B-17 was in a flat spin that made exits difficult. S/Sgt. Edward R. Rogers, Sgt. Donald F. Maloney and Sgt. William T. Mummery landed near Wevelghen and were captured. They could see Nero crash and the engine broke off and plunged through a farmhouse. The Germans told them that several civilians were killed as a result of the crash. Lt. Seddon managed to evade capture and returned to Molesworth on 6 October 1944. 2Lt. Walter A. Meldrich also evaded capture. 2Lt. Charles D. Burks, 2Lt. George M. Fitzpatrick, S/Sgt. John C. Hess, Sgt. John Nemchick, and Sgt. I.E. Holcomb, were all captured by the enemy and taken prisoner.

Thru Hel'en Hiwater, #42-39785, piloted by 2Lt. Roy A. Larson, was flying in the No. 5 position. In the vicinity of Werl, Germany, it received a direct hit from anti-aircraft fire. The No. 1 engine caught on fire and it went into a spiral until it hit the ground. One gunner reported seeing six parachutes, another gunner reported seeing nine. S/Sgt. Everett E. Culp later disclosed that a Thru Hel'en Hiwater engine and gas tank had been hit by flak "causing an inferno." He was thrown into the tail section near the tail wheel just before the tail separated from the fuselage. After disentangling himself from the severed control cables wrapped around him, he was thrown from the separated tail section and made a successful parachute jump, landing on the edge of a gulch with rocks below. The tail gunner, Sgt. Herman L. Hodge, also landed on the edge of a gulch and was dragged over the edge into the rocks by his partially inflated parachute. He was captured, but died the next day from a fractured skull and other injuries. Lt. Larson, 2Lt. Milton Feinman and S/Sgt. Thomas J. Campbell were killed. 2Lt. Ronald E. Duncan, 2Lt. Herbert E. Levy, Jr., S/Sgt. Everett E. Culp, Sgt. Lee R. Brim, Sgt. Arthur W. Schinker and Sgt. Duane P. Thayer were all captured and became POWs.

The returning aircraft landed in the dark between 2200 and 2311 hours. Col. Stevens, Group commander said, "It was pretty uneventful for us today. Nothing bothered us and we dropped our bombs in a cloud of smoke and dust in the marshalling yards. The whole place seemed to be on fire by the time we got there." 1Lt. Fred T. Clark, Lead bombardier from Chicago, Illinois, said the results should have been good. "The whole city was in flames when we left. I had my aiming point in my bombsight before the Group ahead smothered it with their bombs, so I just let mine go in the middle of the smoke they raised."
