

303rd BG (H) Combat Mission No. 291

27 December 1944

Target: Railroad Marshalling Yard at Euskirchen, Germany

Crews Dispatched: 39

Length of Mission: 6 hours

Bomb Load: 18 x 250 lb H.E. M57 & 2 x 500 lb M17 Incendiaries

Bombing Altitudes: 23,650, 22,800 & 23,500 ft

Ammo Fired: 7,240 rounds

Freezing weather and fog again restricted operations at many 8th Air Force Bases. None of the 38 Group aircraft dispatched returned early.

Thirty-five aircraft dropped 601 250-lb. H.E. M57 and 66 500-lb. M17 incendiary bombs from 23,650, 22,800 and 23,500 feet. Four aircraft jettisoned their bombs. Bombing was visual and some hits were made on the target. High Squadron bombs hit in a field 2 1/2 miles from the target. There were no clouds or contrails in the target area and visibility was unlimited.

There was no enemy opposition and 46 US P-51s provided poor support. Most crews reported seeing only a few friendly fighters. Anti-aircraft fire was moderate, but accurate, over the target. Meager and quite accurate flak was encountered a few miles south of St. Vith, along the battle line. Seventeen aircraft sustained major battle damage and 14, minor damage. Five crewmen were wounded and all aircraft returned to Molesworth.

SHOOT OFF A FLARE — WOUNDED ABOARD

Unusual Experiences of Lt. Basil D. Hight, Jr.

It was the 27th of December 1944 and we were feeling good about it all. The crew of Lt. M. M. Stiver's crew had a successful trip over the rail yards at Euskirchen, Germany. There were no enemy flak and no fighters, therefore no matter that there was also no escorting P-51s.

This was our fourth bombing raid and the first time we had seen Germany, much less the target. Our three previous trips had been 10/10ths cloud cover. Our navigator, Leon Beasley, was kneeling beside me with maps in hand and was giving us a cook's tour of Germany. His father had been in World War I and Leon recognized the names of some of those old battle sites that we were now approaching. Suddenly all hell broke loose as the front-line German gunners began firing at and hitting us. Our path out of Germany had taken us too near to the point of attack of Hitler's winter offensive which was now beginning. The waist gunner, Bob Wilson reported that he had been hit in the leg—shortly a report of bandits in the area—Bob asking for help—it all happened so fast.

The pilot was sending me to help, but I suggested the navigator since I would be needed on the nose guns with enemy fighters around. Stiver reminded me that he would be needed to layout the shortest way back to Molesworth. I had to agree, so with shaking hands I reluctantly attached the portable oxygen bottle and made my way through the now empty bomb bay and the radio room to assist Bob.

He had been hit behind the knee and it seemed to me that it had bled profusely. I managed to cut the flying suit so that I could apply a tourniquet to stop the bleeding, knowing full well that he was going to die any minute. I soon realized that I had been out of touch with the crew so I unplugged his headset and used the connections to tell them how he was. I never reconnected his headset since I felt he would be better off not hearing.

By now he was in severe pain and I realized I had not yet administered morphine. I took out a vial and immediately broke the frozen needle. Remembering my training, I then placed two vials under my arm pit and in due time successfully injected one into the calf of his leg. We had been warned about leaving the tourniquet on too long so periodically I released the pressure and each time he would yell in pain. It finally dawned on me that I had applied the morphine below the tourniquet. I managed to cut away some more of his suit and get a shot above the restriction.

Everything else was going for the better. No enemy fighters appeared so we left the formation at the coast and rapidly descended below the need for oxygen. At last I divested myself of the portable oxygen bottle that seemed to always be in my way. The radio operator came to my assistance and also administered moral support to us, which I sorely needed.

Though badly laced with shrapnel, the plane was not severely damaged. The navigator got us to Molesworth long ahead of the Group and the medical crews were ready and waiting when our wheels stopped rolling. There were 168 flak holes patched we were told.

Bob Wilson never flew again, and he also never regained complete use of his leg. He frequently used a cane but he was able to go into the construction business with his father-in-law in West Virginia. He and his wife had a child each year for the next five or six. Several times during those years, I told him he survived in spite of me—not because of me.

I'm well aware that this situation was not so unique. Many times during the next few months I was far more severely frightened, but that fourth mission is burned in my memory forever.
