

303rd BG (H) Combat Mission No. 324

26 February 1945

Target: Marshalling Yard at Berlin, Germany

Crews Dispatched: 39

Length of Mission: 8 hours, 40 minutes

Bomb Load: 6 x 500 lb H.E. M43 & 4 x 500 lb M17 Incendiaries

Bombing Altitudes: 25,000, 24,500 & 26,500 ft

Ammo Fired: 650 rounds

The once-dreaded Big "B" (Berlin) again became the target when a Field Order specifying a marshalling yard in Berlin was received. Berlin had lost much of its terrifying aspects as a target and crews even looked forward eagerly to a Berlin mission. The secondary target was also Berlin, if PFF bombing was required. Suggested last resort targets were Brandenburg, Briest and Rathenow, Germany. No aircraft returned early.

Thirty-nine aircraft dropped 228 500-lb. H.E. M43 and 151 500-lb. M17 incendiary bombs from 25,000, 24,500 and 26,000 feet by PFF through a 10/10 undercast with tops at 12,000 to 14,000 feet. There were no contrails at flying altitudes. Results were unobserved, but all three PFF navigators believed their results were excellent.

MORTON C. PERKINS CREW - 358th BS
(crew assigned 358BS: 02 Feb 1945)

There was no enemy air opposition. The Luftwaffe again distinguished itself by remaining safely on the ground. Flak at the target was moderate to intense and generally inaccurate. No aircraft received battle damage and there were no casualties.

One aircraft failed to return – B-17G #44-6316, 360BS. Pilot 2Lt Morton C. Perkins, called the Group leader shortly before reaching the target and stated that he had a gas shortage and engine problems. He did not believe he could make the return journey and was heading for Russian territory. The aircraft made a wheels-up landing at Zolotonosha, Russia, near the Poltava Headquarters of the Eastern Base Command USSAFE. The crew was unhurt and returned to England by Air Transport Command.

BELLYING IN—IN THE SNOW—IN RUSSIAN TERRITORY

Unusual Experience of S/Sgt Walter D. Beckwith

On the 26th of February, 1945, we took off on a mission to Berlin to bomb the railroad marshalling yards. Lt. Perkins was the Pilot and I was the Tail Gunner on the crew. On the way to the target we began having trouble with one engine, which began using a lot of fuel.

Lt. Perkins did not believe that aircraft, #44-6316 (No Name), could make it back to friendly territory, so just before we dropped our bombs he called the Group Leader and told him we were heading for the Russian lines. We were sort of sweating it out with the Russians, but the weather was so bad we couldn't see a thing so we kept going until we began running out of fuel.

We had a great Navigator, Lt. Robert Wallace, who was later to make another crash landing in Germany, flying with a lead crew and was taken prisoner. Lt. Wallace had no maps of that part of the country but he was pretty sure that we were over flat land. No one wanted to bail out so we let down until we broke out of the soup—about 400 feet, and sure enough, we were over real flat farm country.

We bellied in on a field covered with snow which enabled us to slide real good and we stopped near a small village with a river. We later found out that the place was Zolotonosha, USSR. The plane was later salvaged.

We weren't sure what our reception would be like when the people started heading towards the plane, but as soon as we made them understand that we were American, everything turned out OK.

With the help of a woman who spoke French, we went into the village and got everything sorted out. We ended up splitting up and staying with three or four different families that night. I still to this day don't know what kind of fat meat we ate that night, but we had the same for breakfast the next morning.

Later that day we all gathered in the village hall where they gave us a banquet of fried chicken accompanied with a lot of wine and vodka, with which we had to drink one toast after another to Stalin, Roosevelt and Perkins. A couple of the younger guys got sick because their systems weren't used to that sort of thing.

That afternoon, they flew us out in five small ski planes. My plane was one passenger open cockpit, so I got down as low as I could to keep warm. The pilot must have thought I fell out because he stood up and looked back and I gave him the thumbs up, to let him know that all was OK. We landed at one of their bases and kept sort of isolated.

I ate a lot of spam and eggs while I was there, which was what I believe to be about one week. We had a Russian woman who was a Lieutenant in their Army, as an interpreter. She really wanted my flying boots, so I let her wear them while we were there but I told her I had to have them back when we left. Finally, we were shipped to Poltava, Russia by train. The cars had shelves that pulled down from the walls to sleep on, but as soon as we laid down on them, the lice started to make meals out of us.

As soon as we got to Poltava, they had to delouse us and we stayed there for about three or four days. We were flown out by our Air Transport Command. Our first stop was Tehran, Iran, where we stayed overnight. From there on to Cairo, Egypt, where we stayed for two nights and got to see some of the sights.

We stopped at a British base at Tobruk, North Africa, for refueling and then on to Athens, Greece. From there we went to Naples, Italy, where we stayed overnight and then back to London. We finally got back to Molesworth on the twelfth day of March and then went back on duty.
