

303rd BG (H) Combat Mission No. 337

15 March 1945

Target: German High Command Hdqrs. at Zossen, Germany

Crews Dispatched: 39

Length of Mission: 8 hours, 32 minutes

Bomb Load: 6 x 500 lb H.E. M43 & 4 x 500 lb M17 Incendiaries

Bombing Altitudes: 23,000, 22,800 & 24,500 ft

Ammo Fired: 2,850 rounds

Forty aircraft, including a 41st CBW Scouter aircraft (#42-31055 Aloha) piloted by LtCol William C. Sipes were dispatched to attack:

First	Zossen — German Army Headquarters
Second	Spandau, near Berlin — Deutsche Industrierwerke A.G. (Visual)
Third	Spandau — Auto Union A.G. (H2X)
Fourth	Stendal — Railway workshops (visual)
Fifth	any military objective in a defined area (visual or H2X)

Thirty-eight aircraft in the 303rd BG(H) formation dropped 222 500-lb. H.E. M43 bombs, 148 500-lb. M17 incendiary bombs, and ten leaflet units on the first priority target visually. Two runs were made on the target by the lead and high Squadrons after the lead Squadron was cut out on the run by an unidentified Bomb Group. There were no clouds over the target, but smoke and haze hindered target identification. The lead and high Squadron results were poor, but the low Squadron results were good. Dense, persistent contrails were present on the bomb run.

ORIGINAL THOMAS W. RICHARDSON CREW - 427th BS

Three German jet aircraft were observed south of the target area, but did not attack Group formations. Flak was only observed at the Minden, Hannover, and Berlin area. Friendly fighter support by 82 P-51s was good and there was no battle damage or casualties on the returning aircraft.

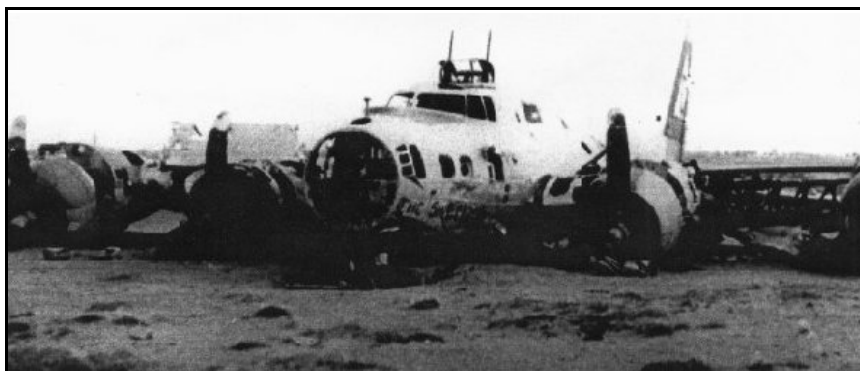

One aircraft failed to return — #43-39220 Smilie Jack (aka Shillelagh), 427BS. It was last seen at 1409 hours. 2Lt. Thomas W.

Richardson, the pilot, called in on VHF reporting that he was going to abort, had one engine feathered, and was heading for the lines. He did not specify which lines, but it was believed he meant the western front lines. Later 1st AD records indicate that the B-17 landed at Okecie airfield near Warsaw, Poland. All crewmen were unhurt.

In 1996, Thomas W. Richardson wrote about the event:

I was flying as lead of the high flight on my 17th mission. About a dozen rounds of flak burst in front and under my left wing. Gasoline immediately flooded our plane and the #2 engine stopped running. The prop was windmilling and couldn't be feathered. Some flames on the #2 engine were reported by the Ball Turret Gunner, Sgt John M. Graves, and gas was leaking from the left wing tanks. I put the airplane in a dive to put the fire out. This caused the Squadron Leader to believe that we were going down, but the dive put out the fire.

I asked the Navigator, F/O William R. Rubins, to give me a heading back to base as we couldn't keep up with the group formation. The Navigator advised me that if we headed back to base we would either go down behind German lines or crash into the North Sea. He couldn't offer any hope, after our fuel loss, of reaching American lines. I wanted to save my crew and plane so we could get back into combat, so I decided headed east hoping to find an airfield behind Russian lines, save my crew, and get back to England.

Crash of B-17G #43-39220 Smilie Jack aka Shillelagh

With favorable wind and luck we flew over Poland but could not find an airfield. My fuel then ran out so I had to crash land in a field near Warsaw. After crash landing, the Russians put us under guard with British, American and German POWs. We were placed in POW rail cars under guard attached to the end of a number of cars full of German prisoners. I talked with the British POW Commandant and he advised me in no uncertain terms that we were POWs and would be treated as POWs. We had a discussion about this to little effect.

We were taken to Odessa, Ukraine and turned over to the British, put on a British ship and transported to Naples, Italy. Our government made us swear to secrecy about how we were treated by the Russians.

When we got back to Molesworth on May 7, 1945 we were the lowest ranking combat crew on base. Pilots who had never been shot at were 1st Lts. My 359th BS Commanding Officer would not, and was not interested in trying, to get my officers an increase in rank from 2nd Lt. He said he would get my enlisted men promoted but this never happened. We were awarded an Air Medal with one oak leaf cluster. My crew tried to put me in for a Distinguished Flying Cross — that didn't get anywhere. My CoPilot, 2Lt Peter D. Ayling, and myself, were quite angry after our return to the USA, and still are, as to how our crew was treated after our return to Molesworth.
